Child & Spousal Support Unemployment Insurance

Covering Child and Spousal Support Payments When Involuntary Unemployment Occurs

It does not take being out of work for very long before both parties start experiencing the financial hardships and legal consequences of non-payment of court ordered child and spousal support payments. State unemployment benefits pay very little, and they only pay for a limited period of time. InsuredSupport®, also known as Marital Settlement Agreement Insurance (“MSAI”), is now available in all states except Alaska and Hawaii.

Court support orders can be for many years; for most people, over long periods of time, it is not a matter of “if” one becomes unemployed, but a matter of “when”. It is important to plan ahead for those “life events” that could make it difficult, if not impossible, to meet court ordered obligations. InsuredSupport® MSAI can be placed on existing divorce decrees, with or without a marital settlement agreement.

Coverage should definitely be considered on all new divorce proceedings, regardless of whether you are doing it yourself, or with a family law attorney. There are additional enforceability advantages if you are using an attorney. These are explained in the Frequently Asked Questions at www.insuredsupport.com

Missed payments are not excused and only add more pressure during difficult times. The most common cause of the inability to pay court ordered obligations is the loss of employment. It is now possible, for the first time in America, to insure your court decree or marital settlement agreement for up to 24 weeks per year with involuntary unemployment coverage. InsuredSupport® MSAI is surprisingly affordable. Get a free quote yourself, online.

InsuredSupport® MSAI coverage is truly beneficial to both parties. Better yet, it can be purchased on a “do-it-yourself” basis online at www.insuredsupport.com or by calling 888-593-8752.

IncomeAssure® MSAI is new and if you are going to ask your attorney for assistance, your attorney may not yet be aware of how it may benefit your situation.
